I already have the express 101 (the precurwor to this). Worked okay, but I don't live alone and hate cooking in hatches

Guess you have to add C-Clamps to keep it closed. I'd just never buy this cheap crap.

Hate to say it, but it's kind of common sense not to make an air tight seal when cooking something that produces steam or expands. You see what happens when you do create that air tight seal. Oh, but the instructions tell you to latch the lid. If your owners manual for your vehicle said to hook a hose from the exhaust to the inside of your vehicle and drive with the windows up, would you do it, or would you use common sense? When you use common sense it actually works pretty good.

The eggs are creating a seal and allowing steam pressure is building up inside the machine. You just bought a pressure cooker bomb.

Like microwaving a boiled egg... At least you didn't get burned by runny eggs... Or you did, maybe, and walked it off.

Is the latch supposed to be locked during cooking? I bet if you read the instructions it'll say not to lick while cooking.

You clearly need to learn how to read instructions, which states in bold letters that you are NOT supposed to latch it while in use. Only use latch for transport n storage! Better try doin a vid where you read the instructions as you use the product that might help your cause!

That's a safety measure for idiots who get their hands stuck in the thing somehow and can only unplug to release? I would become addicted to omelettes if I got one of these ^_^ I enjoyed the show ^_^
